DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. With respect to claims 1 and 11, applicant's does not describe in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that has support for "substantially flat interface." Instead, applicant has support for only a "flat interface."

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 11-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. With respect to claim 11, it is unclear whether applicant is claiming the alignment weight apparatus or whether applicant is claiming the resultant structure of the circuit board and pins. Applicant's recitation of the circuit board and pins appear to be merely an intended use of the alignment weight. The examiner notes that a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. In a claim drawn to a process of making, the intended use must result in a manipulative difference as compared to the prior art. See In re Casey, 152 USPQ 235 (CCPA 1967) and In re Otto, 136 USPQ 458, 459 (CCPA 1963). To put it another way: While the features of an apparatus may be recited either structurally or functionally, claims directed to an apparatus must be distinguished from the prior art in terms of structure rather than function.

Response to Arguments

Applicant argues that the Examiner cannot support his rejection under non-enablement under 112, first paragraph. The examiner agrees. The examiner, however, has made no enablement rejection under 112, first paragraph. The written description requirement is separate and distinct from the enablement requirement. In re Barker, 559 F.2d 588, 194 USPQ 470 (CCPA 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1064 (1978); Vas-Cath, Inc. v. Mahurkar, 935 F.2d 1555, 1562, 19 USPQ2d 1111, 1115 (Fed. Cir. 1991). The written description requirement has several policy objectives.

“[T]he essential goal’ of the description of the invention requirement is to clearly convey the information that an applicant has invented the subject matter which is claimed.” In re Barker, 559 F.2d 588, 592 n.4, 194 USPQ 470, 473 n.4 (CCPA 1977). To satisfy the written description requirement, a patent specification must describe the claimed invention in sufficient detail that one skilled in the art can reasonably conclude that the inventor had possession of the claimed invention. See, e.g., Moba, B.V. v. Diamond Automation, Inc., 325 F.3d 1306, 1319, 66 USPQ2d 1429, 1438 (Fed. Cir. 2003). In the instant case, it is the examiner's position that the specification does not show that applicant had possession of the broadly claimed "substantially" term. That is, while the term "substantially" is enabled, it is the examiner's position that it fails the written description requirement in that applicant's specification does not have support for the broadly claimed "substantially" term.

Applicant next argues that the claim 11 is "clearly directed toward [] structural elements: (a) an alignment weight, (b) a circuit board, and (c) a plurality of pins." The examiner disagrees. Applicant's preamble clearly shows the claim is directed to an apparatus. The difficulty lies in determining, exactly, what is the apparatus. In the instant case, the apparatus appears to be the alignment weight and the workpieces appear to be the circuit board and the pins. This is important because the recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention (i.e., what workpieces the apparatus operates on) must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim.

To eliminate this confusion, the examiner strongly recommends applicant amend the preamble from an "apparatus" to a --system--.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
